Proposed ordinance is opposed by sportsmen

Approximately 30 representatives of local hunt clubs appeared at a public meeting to oppose a proposed ordinance which would regulate "firearms in Appomattox County."

Franklin Vaughan, chairman of the Board of Supervisors, said that he did not feel this ordinance would be any easier to enforce than putting laws on the books just to put them on the books," he said.

The supervisors tabled taking any action on the ordinance after the discussion of the differing points of view.

In other business, Supervisors received reports from the county's special projects assistant, that progress is being made in resolving litigation which is blocking Appomattox cable television franchise.

The Supervisors also voted to approve a resolution to commend the "collection, storage and disposal" of chemicals, wastes or dangerous substances from the county's boundary law. He added that the law is a state law and can be enforced by any law enforcement officer.

"Controls on guns are what the landowners' rights.

"Control on guns are what the people who called the proposed ordinance "tampering with a basic right."

"Tampering with a basic right is something it is," Aistrip added. He then presented the Board of Supervisors with petitions opposing the ordinance signed by within the county.

Carmody pointed out that he doesn't feel that the ordinance is necessary at this time. He stated that existing law prohibits discharge of any firearm within 100 yards of a road.

Sheriff's Department said that it is difficult to enforce, since a law enforcement officer would have to weapon in order to make the arrest.

Appomattox County Sheriff J. E. Richardson added this week that the person in the county has the right to own a gun and as one reason the Abbitt replied that his group was "not trying to get the right to hunt on anybody's property," adding that

Wanda Gail Moore is one of two new female troopers in Virginia

Not only did her father's experience in the field of law enforcement influence Trooper Wanda Gail Moore with the Virginia State Police, but also her acquaintance Trooper Moore with guns but was instrumental in the decision she made in going into police work.

Gail has been a very active young woman all of her life. In addition to found time to participate in extra-curricular activities. She studied piano and began baton twirling at a very young age. She has collected in excess of 500 trophies and ribbons as proof of her ability in this field.

Keeping active has been a way of life for Gail. Even during the rigors of the Police Academy and the training hardship for Gail, in fact she is she has undergone did not prove a serving the State of Virginia. You know, were Virginia's finest, smiled Trooper Moore.

"When questioned about her 'mannish haircut, she replied, "At first, when I got it cut I went home looked and I got used to it.

Trooper Moore has been assigned to the Appomattox County High School as a resource officer. She is the first female trooper to be assigned to a high school in Appomattox County.

Trooper Moore met all the requirements, she's a full fledged trooper, qualified to enforce all the laws of the Commonwealth of Virginia, commented Hdq. Sgt. W. H. Craft of the local Virginia State Police.

Appomattox has 11 women troopers including the two recent graduates.

"In February of '80 and '81 we collected 150 units of blood," said Mrs. Alice M. Abbitt, was on hand to oppose an ordinance which would prohibit hunting within 100 yards of any road within the county.

The ordinance was suggested by several landowners who became angry at hunters hunting in the county roadways.

The ordinance was tabled pending the outcome of a petition supporting the ordinance signed by approximately 100 persons.

Allen Carmody, speaking on behalf of the group proposing the ordinance, said that there was a verbal confrontation between himself and several hunters hunting on his property.

Carmody said that he posted land as one reason the ordinance was proposed.

Abbitt replied that his group was "not trying to get the right to hunt on anybody's property," adding that the group supports protection of landowners' rights.

If you happen to find yourself driving in the Arlington area after February 16, drive with care, because you may be stopped by a brand new trooper. The state police will graduate its first female trooper on that day.

Wanda Gail Moore, the daughter of Melvin Dallas and Bethel B. Moore, began her work as trooper on February 16 after completion of training at the Police Academy in Richmond. Trooper Moore, who was nicknamed Little One by the men in her class, is the first female to graduate from the Appomattox County High School. Trooper Moore graduated with distinction from the University of Virginia in 1981 with a major in speech communication.

Father Darkleaf

By CALVIN ROBINSON

Sunday I met my father-in-law for lunch at a car agency on Confederate Boulevard, Appomattox, and from the car's radio was a neat 12 x 18" Confederate flag.

The first half of brought us a wide variety of weather, but fortunately short of sleet. As I write this on Monday there will be more bleak days ahead, but can Spring be far behind? And I am Spring is needed. I note that my favorite baseball team, the New York Yankees is training in Florida. First big league team to get started. I am an old Yankee fan, but each year I take a while to learn who's on first. At the moment basketball remains king of the sports world, but I find soon tall pieces of China claims to have the tallest woman in the world, about seven feet, and I'll guess some American women's college will bring her games are decided in the final seconds. California of Pa. 58, Slippery Rock 57, for example.

May 6 has been proclaimed as National Day of Prayer. Fine But would want any day to go by without a moment of prayer.

Thanks to Mrs. Helen Gunter for a copy of Ohio Daily Accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Frances Rogers, Mrs. Gunter is a store manager in Dayton.

Anyone remember the first golf club in Appomattox? Just out of town on the road to the Old Court there, as old Ned Hancock, the late Dr. D. N. Twyman and Joel Flood and many others.

I am on volume ten of Green's History of the English People. It is inspiring to note that greatness can arise from defeat. Appomattox after April 9, 1865, England, too, for from its defeat and surrender at Yorktown in 1781. England greatness. Military success, ultimately, is not the only measure of maxing in the defeat of Napoleon by Waterloo, of the 1870's accompanied winning of a vast colonial empire. But the revival of a defeated tion of invention and industrial growth, alongside a new age in religion, communication, the arts and sciences, and the rise of democracy, revolutionized transport, a new way of smelting iron, the power loom, the use of steam, the fly shuttle, the invention of brilliant statesmen headed by the gifted William Pitt, and of such literary stalwarts as Johnson, Boswell, Gibbon, Sheridan. So, the lesson of history is that from the dust of defeat there can come gold dust of greatness, or as nothing yet." Thanks for reading and seeya around.
